THE ART OF PARENTING

Parenting is one of the most rewarding yet humbling experiences. As much as we'd like to believe that our love and guidance will shape our children exactly as we envision, life has its own plans. Parenting is about the process, not guaranteed outcomes. Even great parents don't always see their dreams for their children fulfilled.

So how do we survive the long haul? One parent told me how he feels about parenting. Parenting is like running a marathon... except there's no finish line, and you're carrying everyone's stuff. Whenever I give my kid a look that he should be giving me a helping hand, he gives me a look like he is already retired. A second parent, The only nachat I have from my children is when they are sleeping. A third parent, Parenting is not a full-time job. Its more like overtime with no coffee breaks. Going to the supermarket is the only way I get some me time, it is my "spa day".

So how do we deal with this? Two options. Chocolate and Laughter. If laughter does not help, reach out for more chocolate. One parent said, My kid asked me what's for dinner. I responded, 'Whatever you're cooking!' The look of betrayal was priceless. So I reached for some more chocolate.

There is a third option though. When you stop expecting your kid to be a mini-you, they'll surprise you by being their best them. Don't prescribe the nachas your children should give you, and they will amaze you with the nachas they will come up with. If you love them as they are, they'll grow into who they're meant to be. Your job isn't to mold your child; it's to discover them. Kids aren't projects to complete; they're humans to cherish. Your kids don't need you to be the perfect parent. They need you to be the present parent. Parenting isn't about controlling the outcome; it's about enjoying the ride.

Parenting is a long game. Its long, because it is infinite unconditional trust and love, endless second chances, and hugs that we show that nothing in the world will ever stand in between the hearts of a parent and a child. A home is not a place of boundaries and rules for the sake of control, a home is not a factory to create the perfect child. Instead, the boundaries and rules of the home are just there to make it a safe place to plant seeds that bear fruit in ways we never expect—or even see.

All the rules and boundaries Yitzhak had in his home did not suffice to throw out an Esav. We don't know more about any test that Yitzhak had in life, more than his test in parenting. Never giving up on a child who from the very womb, wanted to serve idols. As our Rabbis teach, that when Rivka was pregnant with the twins, Yaakov and Esav, Esav would try jumping out, to run to the Houses of Idol Worship. That was his nature. Although Yitzhak may have brought up Esav the wrong way, trying to bring him up like a Yaakov in the beginning, as the passuk says ויגדלו הנערים, but Yitzhak switched his parenting method to one of love and acceptance, once he saw that the regular way wasn't working. (R Shimshon R. Hirsh)

Yitzhak never gave up on Esav's potential, even when Esav did not grow up to be a Yaakov. From a parenting perspective, this might seem like a failure—but it wasn't. This always bothered me. So what did all the parenting unconditional love help Yitzhak with his son Esav, if he never turned around? All this twisted parenting, didn't twist any children!!!

The answer is that our influence as parents may not manifest in the way we expect, or even within our own child. It could skip a generation, or emerge in a critical moment. You see, Esav has a child Elifaz. Being that Esav was always around Yitzhak's home, Elifaz, Esav's son, had a religious Grandpa to learn from, Grandpa Yitzhak! Now, not much came out of Elifaz either, as a matter of fact, he was the father of Amalek, the nation that is G-d's sworn enemy. But there was one circumstance, that Elifaz had a test, which was well worth all of Yitzhak's patience with Esav, which played out in that critical moment in history. When Yaakov ran away from Esav, Esav sent his son Elifaz after Yaakov to kill him. When Elifaz caught up with Yaakov, he didn't kill him, Elifaz couldn't go through with it. Influenced by the moral lessons he had absorbed through his connection to his grandfather, Yitzhak, Elifaz chose mercy. He spared Yaakov's life and instead took his wealth, leaving Yaakov impoverished, to fulfill his father's command symbolically. This is why when met Rachel he cried on her shoulders, that he came empty handed, not like Eliezer came to get Rivka, with all of Avraham's wealth. This is why Yaakov said, that he crossed the Jordan river with just his staff, because all that he had, Elifaz took. Elifaz knew, that a poor man is considered dead, especially to his father Esav. This decision of Elifaz not to kill Yaakov, rooted in Yitzhak's values, ultimately preserved Yaakov's destiny and changed the course of history. It is why we are here right now, reading this article.

Yitzhak's love to Esav planted seeds that sprouted in an unexpected way: in Esav's son, Elifaz. That is what Jewish parenting really is, it is just planting seeds, seeds that sometimes need to rot, before they will one day, sprout into something significant. This parenting style might seem disheartening, but the story of Elifaz reminds us that parenting is about planting seeds that bear the most unexpected fruit, not controlling outcomes. Yitzhak's love didn't transform Esav into a Yaakov, but it did ensure that the legacy of morality and compassion lived on through Elifaz. Even if your child doesn't follow the path you hope for, the seeds of love and values you plant can influence future generations, save lives, and change the world in ways you may never see.

You have to trust the Long Game of Parenting. The game begins with letting go of ego in parenting. Let go of the ego that says, "My child's choices reflect my success." The long game of parenting is one of faith, humility, and trust in the ripple effects of your love.

THE ART OF MENTAL HEALTH DURING WARTIME

University of Utah put out an article on their website, quoting something from Steve Sugden, MD, a colonel in the US Army Reserves and a psychiatrist at Huntsman Mental Health Institute (HMHI). Sugden knows first-hand what it is like to be on the battlefield and is a medical expert on how trauma can affect our mental health. Sugden suggests that there are some common mental health consequences of war and that those viewing traumatic content are also at risk. The three populations susceptible to negative mental health consequences of depression, anxiety and psychosomatic problems such as insomnia are: Civilians within the targeted homeland. The soldiers on both sides of the conflict. Those consuming the images, videos, and audio of the war through social media apps, television, radio and the web. "All three groups can develop mistrust, suspicion and a sense of hopelessness when it comes to conflict close to home or far away. Studies have shown that consumers of a war via television, social media, or other forms of media can be just as impacted as the actual individuals within the conflict."

Of course, people feel unsafe after viewing Israel-Hamas/ISIS war! Civilians were attacked, where women, children, elderly, innocent party-goers were attacked in the safest places, in their own homes, first thing in the morning. What can be more traumatic than that?

Trauma begins when a person is exposed to something new and shocking, an unexpected change for the worse. Events where you were frightened, under threat, humiliated, rejected, abandoned, invalidated, unsafe, unsupported, trapped, ashamed or powerless can bring one to different levels of trauma. Trauma can happen in different ways: being directly harmed, witnessing harm to someone else, living in a traumatic atmosphere, being affected by trauma in a family or community. The Jewish Nation, worldwide, is, right now, obviously traumatized.

Trauma can feel like memories that are like a song that gets stuck in the head. They play over and over, sometimes with the words, sometimes just with the music, and sometimes it gets so loud, the person can't hear themselves think! All the traumatized person can think about is what has happened and that it will happen again. Trauma sticks with you, even after the terrible moment has passed.

When dealing with trauma, we have two options to stay protected. 1. Praying to G-d, learning His Torah, and doing Teshuva. 2. Being aware of and implementing our best efforts to protect ourselves. Option 2 causes us to develop a constant need to check the news, to make sure we are doing our utmost to protect ourselves from what is happening, and from what may happen. We become so obsessed with Option 2, that 95% of our time is spent on Option 2, and if we are lucky, if we have some time left, we might spare some time and effort for Option 1. Why so?

The traumatized subconsciously continue to search and predict something new, shocking, or unexpected, to happen. "If things escalate in the Middle East, if Hizballah gets involved, if USA then protects Israel, and then Iran gets into the war, and brings in Russia and China, and then WW III... If WWII happened, so then WWIII can happen... If the colleges escalate, then the shuls and schools are also unsafe... If the ProPals are winning on social media, we have to fight them back on social media, on the מ"ס itself."

This is where the downward negative cycle needs to stop. How?

There is a famous quote from Mark Twain, who attributes the quote to British Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli. "There are three kinds of lies: Lies (a fib, or white lies), Damned Lies (downright lies), and Statistics". Ironically, there are actually at least four types of lies, because that quote itself was a lie by Twain, because Disraeli never said it!

Let me give you a whole new meaning, to the cliché, that "No news, is good news". Statistics is a lie, because statistics are commonly misapplied, often on purpose, to support a position or push an agenda. For the same reason, social media is a lie. X is a lie. Even main-stream news outlets are all fake news...because they all have an agenda... to traumatize you! Believe it or not, the news we trust actually makes money by traumatizing us, which addicts us to keep checking the news and giving it all of our attention. Your attention, then, is sold for marketing purposes to advertisers! The rule in marketing is, "When there is no product to buy, you are the product!" Our attention is sold for A LOT of advertising money, even if it is kosher, Ultra-Orthodox, news websites. Just find out the prices of advertising on the news, and you will understand how much they gain by traumatizing us. This is why, "No news, is good news!"

Before Mashiach, all media will be Fake News. דור שבן דוד בא בו בית הוועד יהיה לזנות, והגליל יחרב, והגבלן יאשם, ואנשי גבול יסובבו מעיר לעיר ולא יחוננו, והכמת הסופרים תסרה, ויראי חטא ימאסו, ופני הדור כפני כלב, האמת נעדרת. והאמת נעדרת. The generation that Mashiach will come, there will be places of openly promiscuous behavior,... the Galil, in North of Israel will be destroyed,... the Gavlan, the Golan, will be desolate.... (Galil is Meron area, while Golan is like Hermon, and higher North.) And the people of the borders of Israel will be displaced from city to city and they won't be acclimated properly... There are currently 500,000 people that left their homes from the North and South of Israel!!! The wisdom of the Rabbis will be disgusting to people, (The amount of Ultra-Orthodox who don't consult with Rabbis is unprecedented) Those who are afraid of sin, the Haredim, will be disgusted... The face of the generation will be like the face of the dog, (leaders, the face of the generation, don't lead. They are always looking behind to make their voters happy, like a dog looks behind to its master, in which direction to go...) And the truth will be lacking. EVERYTHING IS FAKE NEWS. (Sanhedrin 97a) Why is everything fake news?

Because the real truth is, Oct. 7 happened only because we did not have enough merit to protect us, not because anything else. If we look at it this way, then we won't be traumatized. Because, Baruch Hashem, people have done Teshuva, and things look much better than we thought would be... Even the number of Israel deaths went down from a predicted 1400 to 1200. People are praying like they never prayed before, connecting like they never connected before - and that is why things are and will be better than expected, something that you won't find ON ANY NEWS OUTLET.

Everyone predicted that many more calamities would happen to our soldiers in Gaza. Going into their traps, into their tunnels, into an unknown warzone - things could have been really bad ... but the soldiers are saying that they are seeing miracles, they are seeing G-d's Hand! (something that the news is not saying) If we did not do Teshuva, if we did not pray, things could have gotten really bad, things could have gotten worse in Gaza, and that's what made sense, according to the News, Has Veshalom! So, all news is fake news!

King Solomon taught וְאֵין כְּלִי-הַקֶּדֶשׁ תַּחַת הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ And there is nothing new under the sun. (Kohelet 1:9) All news happens Above the sun, in the Heavens. But down here, there is no news. Once the Jewish people act properly, all News is fake news. Allow me to explain.

Who would have predicted, according to the news, that Oct. 7 would happen? No one in the world who watches news could have predicted that Hamas would want or could even do such a thing! The exact opposite! Knowing Israel has such a strong wall and "smart" gate at its border, knowing that things have been quite for so long, knowing that so many Gaza Arabs had work permits on the Israel side made things look serene, which is why IDF was off guard! But the opposite was true! Those work permits, that border, all the quite were the very elements that lead up to the worst tragedy since the Holocaust! So, the news is all a lie!

Hashem says, the news got it all wrong! You think Ukraine is actually fighting Russia? You think IDF is actually fighting Hamas? מלחמות אני עשיתי, שנאמר: Wars I made, as it says, G-d is a Man of War. (Avodah Zarah 2b) What happened was that G-d wanted to wake us up, and we did, just a little late. But as long as we continue to live in unity and pray with our souls on fire, G-d won't let anything bad happen to us. Things will unexpectedly turn for the better!

Ever notice that no news outlets list all the good things that happened and that are happening? All the miracles that the soldiers are saying that they are seeing the Hand of G-d? Here is a list of miracles from R' David Oflalo from Ofakim, miracles he mentioned in a class he gave, miracles that show that as bad as it was, it could have been A LOT worse: 1. They killed only 300 out of 3500 people at the "party in the nature". They had enough terrorists and enough ammunition to kill many more than that. 2. Ofakim. They got to Kiviti, a shul with 500 people praying, no one that prayed there had ammunition. But instead of entering the shul, they turned around and went to Mishor Hagefen, a neighborhood four minutes away, a place where a lot of police live. That was the first place that that group of 40 fully-equipped terrorists had confrontation. Unfortunately, 16 policemen died, but they fought off the terrorists. Hashem blocked their eyes from killing 500 people that were in the shul. Afterwards, maps were found in the terrorists' clothes showing they knew where the shuls are, and it was actually their number one target. 3. The famous Rachel Ederi story. She invites 5 terrorists into her home, and they don't touch her! "Come eat cakes! Look how tired you look! ..." and in the meantime, she had them in her house for 13 hours, until the terrorists were killed! 4. One person Mr. Belia, was able to let his whole family down from the window, although unfortunately by the time he was ready to climb out, he was shot. But his whole family was saved. 5. One religious Kibbutz where the terrorists wanted to enter, a tank came in and started to fight with the terrorists, and it killed 50 of them. Afterwards, the tank left. The people from the kibbutz afterwards wanted to know who was the one who drove this tank, but no one in the army knows where the tank came from! The army said, at that time, we still were not prepared with tanks! 6. One of the Golani soldiers said that we had a miracle. We were only 30, each with just one cartridge, and we were able to kill over 100 terrorists who were fully supplied with ammunition. Not one bullet missed its target. Each bullet, hit a different terrorist in the head. 6. Someone in Otef Azah said that he entered the safety room. The door wasn't closing properly. He held the door closed, holding on to the handle, while his family was inside, and for a few hours he was holding the door, while the terrorists were trying to open the door. After, they asked him how he held strong for so many hours? He said, simple. One hand holding the handle, another hand he kept on the mezuzah. Everyone in the family was saved. 7. A family jumped from the window of the safety room, and they laid on the ground for 13 hours, while terrorists were walking back and forth all day long, and no one saw them. 8. In one of the kibbutzim, there was a person who for the first time, took upon himself to make the sukkot holiday. He took apart his sukkah, after sukkot, and threw the Schach next to the house. When the terrorists came, he and his family hid under the Schach till the next day. כִּי יִצְפְּנֵנוּ בְּסֻכּוֹתַי בְּיוֹם הָרֵעָה 9. In Kibbutz Nir OZ, two or three months before the attack, someone ordered a "pladelet" door for the front door of his house; instead, they brought him a meshuryenet door, a door that costs a few thousand shekels more, because it is an armored door. Instead of arguing about the extra fee, he just looked past it. On Simhat Torah, the terrorists were able to break through all the neighboring doors, but this door, they could not penetrate. 10. In Tzafriah next to Ben Gurion airport a bomb fell into a house, on Thursday night, and destroyed the whole house. But on Thursday night, before the bomb, they set up the table for Shabbat. The whole table stayed intact: not one cup was moved! The tefillin stayed intact, and the picture of Rav Ovadia Yosef was untouched! The rest of the whole house - every part of it, was destroyed. 11. In Ofakim, on Shabbat, a bomb fell in a religious man's courtyard and broke his whole house, windows were broken, terrorists were outside. He ran past them, and they asked him, "Where do you think you are going? We are terrorists!" He said, "I don't care! My wife and kids are inside the house! He ran inside his home, he brought his wife and kids into the safety room. He stood outside the safety room, with a knife in one hand and a Tehillim in the other. He calls the police, the army, no one is answering him! He watches as the terrorists pass back and forth in front of his hand, and the terrorists passing his house while his windows are all open! 12. The terrorists had plans of getting up until Shomron, we are lucky they did not get further than where they got. 13. There were terrorists that came to Netivot, and they did not shoot anyone, kill anyone. In the end, the terrorists were caught and they were asked why they did not kill anyone. They said there were three Sheikhim that were angry at them from the Heavens. They were right next to the grave of the Baba Sali. They were shown pictures of the Baba Sali, R Yoram Abergil, and R Yissacher Meir, buried close to one another in Netivot. The terrorists quickly said, "Yes! These were the three Sheikhs that told them, from the heavens, Get out of here quickly! If you know what is good for you!

14. There were Tatzpaniot, (IDF Watchguards) that saw that the terrorists were coming into the Otef Aza; they killed everyone there. Whoever they did not kill, they kidnapped. The two guards said to one another, "We have just seconds to live; let us take upon ourselves to keep Shabbat!" The terrorists did not see those Tatzpaniot! They just passed them again and again! 15. All the kibbutzim that kept Shabbat, the terrorists did not enter. 16. In S'derot a terrorist came in, with a lot of ammunition. He went into the elevator, and the elevator had an electricity failure. The terrorist started to scream that he was stuck in the elevator and he had no air. Police came, and they sent him away. 17. There was someone who went outside his house to see what was going on. He was shot at the entrance of the house, and he fell dead. He had inside two-and-a-half families, who spent the holiday together, with no safety room. The terrorists who passed near the house, again and again, the whole day, did not enter, because they saw a dead person at the entrance, thinking that everyone that was inside was killed. The family kept calling Magen David Edom, but they did not come, until the night, to move the body, which actually saved the family. 18. There were people who would go with their tender (a big van) into the party, even without any ammunition, and take out people from the party, going back and forth, filling up the tender with people each round. Crazy! Someone from Patish did 6 rounds, and loaded up each time, while the bullets were flying all over. At the sixth round, a terrorist caught him together with a girl from one of the Kibbutzim he had come from. He told the terrorist, "Don't shoot! What do you want? Money? Here! Take! ... What else do you want?..." He gave him some more things, and the terrorist let him go with the girl! This man is still crying, saying, I wish I could have saved more people with my tender!

We are seeing miracles being done for the soldier in Gaza. One of the commanders wrote to his father that in the miracles that we see in Gaza, we see that "there is for sure G-d". They throw grenades at us, but they don't explode. They are duds!

A group of 50 soldiers sat to eat in Gaza. One of the soldiers was playing with his gun and mistakenly shot a few bullets. The soldiers got afraid, and they all jumped to protect themselves. They looked around and they saw that this "accidental" fire ended up killing a terrorist who was coming out of a nearby hidden tunnel! הַמַּלְמֵד יָדִי לַקֶּרֶב אֶצְבָּעוֹתַי לַמִּלְחָמָה

G-d asks from us one thing! Don't fear! Don't get traumatized! In the very merit of not getting afraid, G-d will protect us! G-d said to Avraham, אֱלֹהֵיךָ: אַבְרָם אֲנֹכִי מִגֵּן לְךָ שְׂכָרְךָ הַרְבֵּה מְאֹד Don't fear Avraham, I am your Shield, your reward is great! (Bereshit 15;1) If we trust that G-d is our shield, then our reward is great!

THE ART OF TAMING THE BEAST

The Talmud Yerushalmi in Bikurim teaches that we learn that G-d forgives all the sins of a Hatan, a groom, from Esav. When Esav saw that his parents sent Yaakov to marry a woman who was not from the Canaanites, he wanted to show that he is also a "good son", and he married Yishmael's daughter, Mahlat. The Yerushalmi asks, "Her name is Machlat? Wasn't her name Basmat? It is coming to tell you that when a man marries a woman, G-d forgives, He is "Mochel", all of the Hatan's sins. (Birkurim 3;3)

This forgiveness is granted when the groom realizes what he has done wrong, and he regrets it. Teshuva is easier at this time, if someone takes this opportunity, the new reality of being a husband and G-d willing a father, as a time to repent and start anew. As Rashi learns, Esav became a bigger Rasha by marrying Basmat/Mahlat! How do we reconcile this contradiction? How is he more wicked now, if all his sins were forgiven? It is because he had an opportunity to start anew, and he blew it! He could have seized the opportunity of an easier Teshuva, and he did not!

There is a deeper reason why there is forgiveness for a groom, beyond his starting a new page in life. The Talmud Bavli teaches that a person who is not married is not called Adam; he is not a person. This explains why his sins are forgiven: because all his life, until marriage, man is like an animal. But animals don't get married, so, via wedlock, man demonstrates self-constraint, and readiness to become a father demonstrates selflessness, and that he rises above his animalistic nature. When you become a groom, G-d considers it as if all that you've done till now was not the real you; it was the animalistic part of you. So you are pardoned.

G-d leaves it up to us to make ourselves into Man. Each morning, men bless G-d, שלא עשאני אשה, that He did not make me a woman. We don't bless G-d that He made me a man. Why? Because G-d does not make you a man. You need to make yourself a man! Just like we bless G-d each morning שלא עשאני גוי, that He did not make me a Gentile. We don't bless G-d that He made me a Jew. Because you need to make yourself a Jew. He created you different, but to be a Jew is an everyday battle. To rise above the norm, and to be a light unto the nations.

G-d is most considerate of your background. כִּי יִצְרָךְ לִבְהֵמָה הֵאֱדָמְךָ רַע מִנְעֻרְיֶיךָ. He is considerate about your trials, your failures, your mistakes, your social circles, and the family you came from. After all, He made you an animal, but with the potential of becoming the greatest you can be. On Yom Kippur, a red rope would be hung in the Bet Hamikdash, and if the sins were forgiven when they sent away the Azazel goat, the red rope would miraculously turn to white. This is learned from the passuk, אָם יִהְיוּ חַטָּאתֵיכֶם כַּשָּׁנִים כַּשָּׁלֵג יִלְבִּינוּ (Yeshayahu 1 18) If your sins will be scarlet red, they will become white, like snow. (Yoma 6;8) The word שנים has in it the connotation of red, as the red dye is called תולעת שני. But the word שנים, literally, means years, years of life. (see Yerushalmi Shabbat 9 3) What does this mean, that if you sins are like years of man, G-d will forgive your sins? If your sins are age-appropriate, sins which it is common for people at this age to struggle with, G-d is more forgiving. But if you are still sinning, not in accordance with your age,... when you are old enough to be above the nonsense, it is much harder to get your sins white as snow.

The other day, I was asked to address a staff of a post-high-school, high caliber yeshiva of 600 students in Israel. I was warned that the staff of over 40 included some of the best educators in Israel. The purpose of the speech was to answer one question: How do you spiritually motivate, frum-from-birth, unmotivated teenagers - probably the hardest question in the world to answer. I had an hour. I was told that the staff are not interested in entertaining stories and not in a nice dvar Torah. They wanted tools, and tools that work. They wanted to know how to deal with the ultra-orthodox, uninterested teenager, who says, "I know the truth about the world and G-d, but I just don't have any motivation".

The answer is actually simple. Avraham Avinu and Sarah Imenu converted a million people, each. And the way the Torah refers to that is, וְאֶת־הַנֶּפֶשׁ. אֲשֶׁר־עָשׂוּ בְחַרְוֹן The word used for people, is the word Nefesh. Nefesh is the animalistic part of the soul. Avraham connected to their Neshama through their stomachs. He opened his four-door tent in places where people needed him most, and he would give out the best quality food to all passersby. After the meal, Avraham would explain about thanking G-d through Birkat Hamazon! If you did not say Birkat Hamazon, Avraham gave you a hefty bill! The way to the Neshama is to connect through the Nefesh, the animalistic part of man, the need for survival.

There are three parts of the soul, and they constitute the basis for all of psychology. The Neshama, the Ruach and the Nefesh. On a basic level, this is explained by Maslow's pyramid. At the bottom of the pyramid are the basic needs of man, the "Physiological needs", in order of their importance for survival: air, water, food, shelter, sleep, clothing, reproduction. When a person is busy with these, when these needs are not met, it is much harder to be motivated on the next level of the pyramid, which is the needs of "Safety". Safety needs include: personal security, employment, resources, health, property. After a person achieves these two base drives of the Nefesh, one begins to focus on the Ruach, the next level of human needs, "Love and belonging". Love and belonging includes: Friendship, intimacy, family, sense of connection. After taking care of these, one moves up to the next level, "Esteem". Esteem includes: respect, self-esteem, status, recognition, strength, freedom. Only after these, can one focus on the desire of Neshama, of "Self-actualization", of being G-dly, the most that you can be.

My father built a great shul, and I believe a big part of it was that he had "the best breakfast in town". Over the last years, they have been able to get learning programs pumping in the dead of the winter in Deal, N.J, a summer town on the coast, by offering dinner from the local restaurants. I followed in his ways, and made a change in my Charedi neighborhood, Bayit Vegan, Jerusalem. Girls in these schools at the ages 7th and 8th grade, don't want to hear any tzniut, classes on modesty, from the school, anymore. They feel that it chokes them spiritually when they are told how to dress. So I started a movement on the long winter Saturday nights, where the most popular school teachers who speak best, and connect most, can give an inspiring class on modest dress, without talking about the neckline, knee, or elbows. I was told, by everyone I know in Bayit Vegan, that it won't work, I won't even be able to get more than 8 girls to attend, and that the Charedi system of Israel does not need new ideas. קדש אסור מן התורה. My Rabbi told me, that this can probably be my greatest Olam Haba, and my wife was on board. I wanted girls to learn how to protect themselves, before they would get used to dressing in ways that are not acceptable, as it would be much harder to approach the subject of modesty when they would be older, after 8th grade. But 7th and 8th grade was the perfect time to educate them about the beauty of modesty. So I started to ask people for help, and surprisingly people started donating more than I thought they would.

Bayit Vegan may be an unassuming Charedi neighborhood in Jerusalem, but great things have happened here. One of the greatest, is that the worldwide Avot Uvanim program, where fathers learn with their sons for an hour each weekend, began to spread from here. It started in Gateshead, with just a small group, but the originator came to Bayit Vegan and told some people here about it, where it picked up massive momentum, a while back. Bayit Vegan is known to be the Charedi U.N., Americans, Brits, Mexicans, Panamanians, Argentineans, Belgians, etc. The person who started it in Bayit Vegan, sat next to me at a Bar Mitzvah recently, and told me all about it.

I called the tzniyut program Bat Melech, or Daughter of the King. Very quickly, within the first weeks, we had 80 girls, signed up to come each week, taking upon themselves each week a Chizuk for the week, to get into the raffle of next week on a piece of jewelry from my wife's silver jewelry sale. Each week, I would bring them pizza, ice cream, falafel, Belgian waffle, according to the week, to make it interesting. Girls we never thought that they, or their mothers would be interested in signing up, begged to enter the group!

The nicest part of Bat Melech is that my wife just gave birth to our new baby daughter, two weeks overdue. She was due on Sukkot, but my wife gave birth only Motsaei Shabbat Parashat Noach, on the exact week that a year earlier Bat Melech started!!! When you think you are doing something for other people, you are really doing for yourself!

This year, immediately after my wife said she was ready to start, just 4 weeks after birth, which was last week, we told the teachers involved in Bat Melech to see if there was an interest, again, for this year. A whopping 200 girls signed up!!! That's thirty pies of pizza, and a lot of baked ziti!

The Neshama wants to speak, the spiritual motivation is there. It is just that there is so much internal noise from the Nefesh, from the desires of the animalistic part of the psyche, that if we just connect to the person in that part of his mindset, we can help his/her Neshama to express itself!

Bringing up kids, helping teenagers, is the hardest thing in the world. ואת עמלנו. אלו הבנים. Some things you can't say to a person one on one, but you can say it them to a group. If you can only understand the BEND WIMP, connect to it, and communicate around it, you will be able to motivate anyone. What are their Beliefs? How do they envision Success? What are their Needs? What are their Wounds? What are their Interests? Who are their role Models? What are they most Proud of? This model, by Tony Robbins, is the secret to connect to any audience, as it connects to all parts of the soul Neshama, Ruach and Nefesh!

THE ART OF PATIENCE

Republicans want things to stay the way they were. (GOP - Great Old Party) The Democrats want change; they want to rethink what is considered moral. The Democrats' claim against the Republicans is that the Founding Fathers were not that moral. It was immoral to kill the Indians as they were here first. It is immoral to capture Africans and enslave them. Etc. The Democrats' argument seems to be, why keep the old moral systems if they have no relevant basis today.

Judaism views the ways of both the Republicans and the Democrats as faulty. Moral values are not decided by men of the past or present. Morality is decided by the Torah, by G-d and by the Sages who study G-d's word and are His messengers. Yes, the Torah allows slavery, but, as Abraham Lincoln pointed out in his second Inaugural address, not the way that the Confederates captured and enslaved Africans. Yes, the Jews took over the Land of Canaan, but only because G-d promised it to them (see first Rashi Bereshit), unlike the Founding Fathers who got rid of the Indians.

In his late 20's, Benjamin Franklin recorded thirteen virtues in his Poor Richards Almanac that he attempted to live by. Ben placed each one on a separate page in a small book that he kept with him for most of his life. Ben would evaluate his performance in each one daily. Ben would also select one virtue to focus on for a full week. Although Ben was not successful in keeping to his own virtues, I respect him for, at least, having a moral code that he held himself accountable to! A person feels good with himself/herself only when they have a clear set of moral values and live by them. Did you ever ask yourself what your virtues, ethics, and morals are?

According to Ben, the personal traits to succeed in achieving your goals are Temperance: eat and drink moderately. Order: Everything has a time and place. Resolution: Do what you are supposed to do. Frugality: Waste nothing. Moderation: Avoid extremes. Industry: Lose no time. Cut off all unnecessary actions. Personal Cleanliness: in body, clothes, and living space. Tranquility: Don't let small, common, or unavoidable problems bother you. The five social traits Franklin suggests to improve relationships are Silence: Say only what benefits others or yourself. Sincerity: Think and speak innocently and justly. Justice: Don't cause harm to others; remember their rights and what you owe them. Moral conduct: Remain loyal to your spouse. Humility: Learn from the great, humble of the past.

At the time, R' Yisrael Salanter, father of Mussar, made his own, Torah-based ethical code of thirteen virtues, something he lived by. Compare and contrast R' Yisrael's list to that of Ben's, and you will find great insight. Some of the words in Hebrew cannot be translated into one English word. אמת . Never let a lie leave your lips. זריזות. Don't waste a second. הריצות Do whatever you decide to do promptly and wholeheartedly. כבוד Respect every person, even if you disagree with him/her. מנוחה Be calm and serene, always. נחת Speak calmly. ניקיון Personal cleanliness and purity. סבלנות Have patience with everything that happens in life. ענווה Order and structure. ענווה Recognize your shortcomings and not those of others. צדק Forgive others, give in to others, especially to the poor. קמוץ Don't spend unnecessarily. שתיקה Calculate the benefit of your speech before you speak.

Although the lists seem to be remarkably similar, R' Yisrael's list deals less with Moral relationships and, instead, stresses speaking softly, having patience in dealing with difficult people and situations. R' Yisrael's list adopts the ideas mentioned in the Iggeret Haramban, which focuses, primarily, on humility and soft speech. R' Yisrael also describes humility, instead of recommending learning from people we don't know personally. What is essential to notice is that the nuances are pivot points – that those small differences mature into major ones! Real humility, patience, and soft spokenness, traits that Yaakov exemplified, can make a tremendous overall difference in an entire character!

Yaakov and Esav seemed so similar for the first 13 years of their life. No one knew that they were different. So much so, Yitzhak and Rivka made the parenting mistake of their life: they brought them up the same and gave them the same schooling! (R' Shimshon R. Hirsh) Only when they were 15 did we see the stark contrast between the two. How does the Torah describe the difference at the outset, when they were just 13? Yaakov was an innocent man, dwelling in tents, while Esav was a man who understood hunting, a man of the field. Rashi explains this to mean a man who wastes time and hunts with bows animals and birds. I can understand how Rashi learns that Esav is a man who hunts, but how does Rashi learn that Esav, being a man of the fields, wasted time? The Rosh understands the word שדה to be an acronym שפך דם האדם, which means that Esav would lie in ambush in the fields, away from civilization, to murder people. The K'li Yakar learns that Esav would be in the field to rape girls, in a place where no one would hear them scream. But how does Rashi know that Esav wasted time?

Hunting game is for people who are bored and for people who are materialistic. When a person gets busy with food and drink and other earthly bodily pleasures, he starts to belittle fear of G-d and serving Him. Spirituality becomes secondary when Pleasure comes first. (Rabenu Bachye) Esav had a second name added. Edom. When and why was Edom added? When Esav comes home, tired from sinning 5 major sins in one day, on the day of Grandpa Avraham's death, he smells the lentils that Yaakov was preparing for Yitzhak's meal of mourning. Esav says to Yaakov הֲלֵעֵיטָנִי נָא מִן־הָאֲדָמָה הַזֹּאת Give me, now, a big mouthful of this red pottage. Why did Esav refer to lentils that were being cooked as red? Don't red lentils turn brown when they are cooked?

The answer is that Esav can't wait for the food to be ready! He needs to have what he wants, NOW! Edom means red impatient, unwilling to wait for the big things in life, and, for sure, not for the big things of the afterlife. Not having patience is what led Esav to the five grave sins he committed on that fateful day. Raped an engaged girl, killed, denied G-d's existence, denied the Resurrection of the dead. He could not have the patience to follow the laws of Firstborn Priesthood, so he gave that up too. (Bava B 16b) He didn't have enough self-control to wait for the appropriate time to get married, nor did he have the patience to earn his own money, so he became איש שדה.

At the pivotal point, at the age of 13, the Torah classifies Yaakov as a yeshiva student, and Esav, as a person who wasted time?!? Is that the way to personify such polarized differences?

The answer is that this is where it all begins, at the nuances and small differences in virtues and moral standards. The best men come from patient yeshiva students who maximize their time, and the worst men come from people who waste time and have no patience. Patience, of course, is rooted in humility. Rashi says, on the passuk וְהָאִישׁ מִשָּׂה עֲנִי מֵאֲדָם מִכָּל־הָאֲדָמָה And the man Moshe was the humblest of men, Rashi explains this humility as patience. Because when a person is humble, he realizes that no one owes him/her anything. Neither G-d nor people. Do you realize how much patience G-d has and had for you, waiting for you to take your life seriously? G-d waited during ten generations of sinners, 1656 years, before bringing the Flood, to show us how much patience He has with humanity! (Avot 5,2) There is no better way of being G-dly than by being patient with yourself, others, and with G-d.

final results of the elections, for something big to happen in the news. Waiting for life to get back to normal, for the Covid vaccine, or for the stocks to mature and make me rich. Waiting for a raise, a stimulus, a donation, or an email from a customer. Waiting for an apology, a date, a compliment, a job- offer. I think it is because like R' Yisrael teaches, G-d wants us to learn patience.

Today, more than ever before, people have lost patience for waiting. Waiting for Mashiach, for the

Selfie steps to patience

1. Only with patience can you conquer, master, win, understand, forgive, love, hope, sell, buy, write, educate, heal, diet, grow, succeed, influence, have children and help them transform into adults. A man who is a master at patience is a master at everything else.
2. Patience is not passive. On the contrary, patience is concentrated strength. Your patience can come from a place of letting go of yourself. Or it can come from a place of holding on to yourself. When you run out of patience, it means that your patience came from a weak, inner place, from the outset. Your patience had a limit, an expiration date. Those who their patience endures are those who were strong internally from the beginning. Those who understand that patience is bitter at the outset, but its fruits are sweet don't give their patience any limit. Because they know that all things are difficult before they become easy.
3. Patience is something you have to have the patience to acquire. At every red light, every traffic jam, every disrespectful comment.
4. Learn to become a human being, not a human having or a human doing. We love being in control, watching our efforts produce immediate results, and a direct connection between what we do and what we get. Patience is a lesson that G-d is boss, and that what you have and do, is because G-d allowed it to be so.
5. Ironically, people who have no patience are usually people who waste time. (Esav) Make sure you use your time wisely, working smarter, not harder. The most productive people, the highest achievers, those with the best time management skills, seem to have the most patience.
6. Most importantly, pray for patience, in the Patience Prayer of Elokay Netzor, at the end of Amidah. Pray to watch your tongue, to not respond to adversity, to be humble, to open your heart to wisdom.

LOVE WHAT IS

The Chafetz Chaim once asked a certain Jew how he was doing. The man said, "It would not hurt if life were a bit better." The Chafetz Chaim responded, "How could you possibly know that "it would not hurt" if life would be better? Hashem knows what is best for you, and since He is merciful and only good, He certainly wishes to give you more good than what He has given you. He is certainly capable of giving you more than He has given you. It is obvious from the fact that He has not given you more, that what you have and what you don't is what's best for you!

We internalize this message each and every day. Lesson one – G-d is everything, for He rules in all of our reality – וְאֵתָהּ מוֹשֵׁל בְּכֹל. Lesson two- G-d is solely good. - טוב-יְקַנֵּן לְכֹל יְרַחֵמֵנוּ עַל-כָּל-מַעֲשָׂיו.

The Chafetz Chaim derived this No Complaints lifestyle from a Rashi in this week's Parasha. Rashi asks, when Yitzhak blessed his son with his whole heart, he blessed him in an unusual way. וַיְתַן-לְיָ וַיְבָרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים And Elokim shall give you... Why would Yitzhak use the Name of Elokim, the Name of G-d of Judgement, when blessing his son? Wouldn't the Name of YKVK, the Name of G-d of Mercy, be more appropriate? Rashi writes what the blessing using G-d's Name Elokim infers אם ראוי לא יתן לך ואם לאו לא יתן לך If it is appropriate for you, G-d will give you. And if it is not appropriate for you, He will not give you.... G-d doesn't just give us whatever we pray for, if it is not good for us. Because He trusts us that we trust Him. (See Rashi 27;28)

Yitzhak knew that his son Esav was having difficulty with accepting Elokim, G-d's attribute of Judgement. As the Midrash says, אפר באותו אמר עשו - אפר באותו Esav said, how could it be that even my righteous grandfather Avraham died five years before his time? If so, there is no Judgement, and there is no Judge!

Yitzhak was telling his son, No! All the blessings of life, all the blessings of G-d come in the form of difficulties. As if G-d is judging, behaving harshly. The greatest blessings that G-d gives you come with difficulty. Because the way that G-d gives His blessing is Elokim. Through difficulties and loss, tests and annoyances, sweat and tears.

Every single time the Tanach mentions that G-d blessed anyone or anything, it uses the Name Elokim, His Name of Judgement. וַיְבָרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים ; וַיְבָרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים אֶת-נָח וְאֶת-בְּנָיו ; אֶת-נֹחַ הַשְּׂבִיעִי וְיַמְדַּשׁ אֹתוֹ ; וַיְבָרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים אֶת- יִצְחָק בְּגֹן (Except in two places, where those who were blessed with YKVK, G-d's Name of Mercy, were blessed with unusual blessings - Yosef's master, and Oved Edom HaGiti.) Here, in Yitzhak's blessing, the word Elokim is unique. It does not say Elokim. Rather, it says, HaElokim, The Elokim. When Yaakov blessed Yosef, he also used the Name HaElokim. וַיְבָרֶךְ אֶת יוֹסֵף וַיֹּאמֶר הָאֱלֹהִים אֲשֶׁר הִתְהַלְכוּ אִבְתֵּי לְפָנָיו אֲבָרְכֶם וַיִּצְחָק הָאֱלֹהִים הַרְעָה אֹתִי מֵעוּדֵי עַד הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה. Why HaElokim?

The Seforno on this word HaElokim comments: When you focus on His goodness, even as G-d of Judgment, He will bless your fields. The way for the Jew to bring blessing upon himself is to search for the goodness in the difficulties, to recognize and then focus on the goodness in The Elokim, the judgement.

There is a strange story in the Talmud that brings this concept to light. A certain R' Mani told his Rabbi R' Elyashiv, how his in-laws, who were rich, were acting in a haughty fashion and insulting him. So, R Elyashiv prayed that those rich in laws become poor. When they became poor, they started bothering R Mani, to support them. R Mani told R' Elyashiv, and R' Elyashiv prayed that they become rich again. Then, R Mani complained that he did not like the way his wife looked. R' Elyashiv asked for the name of R Mani's wife. Chana. R Elyashiv then prayed that Chana become beautiful. But then, when Chana became beautiful, she was constantly preoccupied with herself and haughty. She did not want R' Mani anymore. R Mani told this to R Elyashiv, and R' Elyashiv prayed that Chana return to her old looks. (Taanit 23b)

This is something that we can learn from King David. Even when King David was cursed by the Chief Rabbi, Shimi Ben Gera, he said to himself, יְקוּק אֱמַר לוֹ קִלְלֵנִי, G-d of Mercy (YKVK) commanded him to curse me. (Shmuel 2 16:10) King David teaches that we should never take anything personally, because G-d is behind every insult... What? But why? Why would G-d want that person to insult me?

I don't know. But once you accept that G-d is behind the insult, you can realize the benefits, the perks, all the good in the insult that you would not recognize if you would not accept it. Here is a list of a few possibilities. A. To develop acceptance of yourself B. To develop "elephant skin". C. Burn away some calories of pride and arrogance. D. You'll find out who your true friends are. E. You will go to the drawing board and improve yourself.

And, many times, these are a good payoff for the insult.

The Midrash tells us that the power to bless with G-d's Name Elokim was given to Yitzhak. (See Baal Haturim 2;3) Why specifically Yitzhak? Yitzhak was the Patriarch who barely said anything, and who is symbolic of acceptance. Accepting a wayward child, accepting a runaway son, accepting rebellious daughters-in-law, accepting his father's prophecy that G-d wills that he be sacrificed, accepting his mother's tragic death, accepting his grandchildren's decision to sell their own brother. He even accepted himself for making the biggest "mistake" of his life, of mixing up his own children, and blessing the "wrong" son. This is why Yitzhak blessed using G-d's Name Elokim.

I recently saw the following joke, and it taught me a lesson for Shalom Bayit. A married couple was celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary. At the party, everybody wanted to know how they managed to stay married so long. The husband responded, "When we were first married, we came to an agreement. I would make all the major decisions, and my wife would make all the minor decisions. And in 60 years of marriage, we have never needed to make a major decision.

This can be applied to the relationship between Man and G-d, as well, in accepting G-d as Elokim, and that He gives us only what is best for us. G-d wants us to accept what is, minding our own business in those areas in which G-d gives us no choice, and busying ourselves only with decisions in the areas that G-d does give us choice. As Byron Katie wrote, "I am a lover of what is, of reality, not because I'm a spiritual person, but because it hurts when I argue with reality. I can find only three kinds of business in the universe: mine, yours, and G-d's. Reality is G-d, because it rules. Anything that's out of my control, your control, and everyone else's control - I call that G-d's business. Much of our stress comes from mentally living out of our own business. When I think, "You need to get a job", "I want you to be happy", "You should be on time", "You need to take better care of yourself", I am in your business. When I'm worried about past or future, earthquakes, floods, war, or when I will die, I am in G-d's business. If I am mentally in your business or in G-d's business, the effect is separation. Every time in my life that I had felt hurt or lonely, I had been in someone else's business".

Keeping connected with G-d is the only way to be connected to blessing. He doesn't want you to "get involved" in the "big decisions", the areas where you have no choice. He just wants you to say, all day, again and again, יְקַוֶּה אֱלֹהֵינוּ, that YKVK is our Elokim; or, in laymen's terms, that all the judgement of G-d is all His Kindness. To realize that יְקַוֶּה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים YKVK is HaElokim! (Devarim 4;35)

Here are the Selfie Steps: The self-help steps that will help you access the blessings that Yitzhak and Yaakov blessed you.

1. Want what you have and don't want what you don't have. Embrace your life as it is, rather than as you wish it to be.
2. Each blessing you mention YKVK Elokenu, each Shema recital, remind yourself that the difficulties of your life are all G-d's Mercy and blessing.
3. Realize where you have choice in life, and only mind your own business. Not G-d's business. And not anyone else's business.

BIG-PICTURE THINKING

Life coaching is simply asking a bunch of not simple questions. In life, if you just focus on the smallest details, you never get the big picture right.

The job of the life coach is to bring about bigger picture thinking, and to get the big picture right.

Thinking “big picture” is thinking like the Gedolim, the Jewish Leaders. It is the way that the Rishonim, the commentators on Shas, analyze the Talmud and come up with a deeper truth. By bringing in other seemingly contradictory pieces of Talmud and putting it all together, they find a deeper truth that is not recognized at first. If you focus only on the piece of Talmud you are learning at the present, you can never get down to the truth. Because, like the Aron Hakodesh that is symbolic of the Torah, Torah knowledge is a blend of width, length and depth.

If you want to live a life of truth, you cannot focus on the present, alone. When making big picture decisions in life, we need to bring in the future and all the possibilities that it may bring. We need to look at the past and how that might affect the future. Big picture thinking is something we can learn from our Forefather, Yaakov.

וַיְהִי עֶשָׂו אִישׁ יָדַע צֹדֵד אִישׁ שָׂדֵה וַיַּעֲקֹב אִישׁ תָּם הֵם יוֹשְׁבֵי אֹהֲלִים And Esav was a man who knew hunting, a man of the field, while Yaakov was a simple man, who sat in the tents (of Shem and Ever). Of the Four Sons in the Haggadah, the Tam is just a simpleton. On the other hand, Yaakov is described with the virtue of being an Ish Tam, a simple man. In which way is simplicity a virtue? And how can we learn from it? Also, if Yaakov was known for being the Man of Truth, תָּתֵן אֱמֶת לַיַּעֲקֹב, why then was he titled Ish Tam, a simple man, and not Ish Emet, a man of truth? And why was Yaakov known as the man of truth? Wasn't he dishonest to his blind father Yitzhak when he presented himself as Esav while taking the Berachot, even if they were rightfully his?

Rabbeinu Bachye explains that there is a level of truth greater than that of being honest. And that is the level of being Tam, an “all-inclusive truth”. Tam is a Machriah, a blend and underlying truth between two opposing truisms, similar to the word תְּיוֹמָה, the middle of the lulav. (See Alei Shur B; Emet) How so?

In our holy Seforim it is written that there are seven Middot of G-d, and that Avraham personified the Middah of חסד: that even if you are not deserving of something, G-d will, in any case, give it to you. Yitzhak personified the Middah of גְּבוּרָה, that G-d will give you only what you deserve. But Yaakov personified G-d's Middah of תַּפְאָרֶת, or a blend between his father's and grandfather's personification. A blend between גְּבוּרָה, strict judgment and חֶסֶד, endless kindness. That sometimes, even if the truth is that you do not deserve kindness in the present, nevertheless, it could be that something in the past or future has made or will make you deserving of kindness or mercy. This big-picture-truth was the truth of Yaakov. Tam is not just honesty. Tam is finding the all-inclusive, underlying truth.

It is true, in the present, Yaakov was dishonest. But in the big picture, when we figure in both the past and the future in the equation, Yaakov was Emet. For in the past, Esav had sold his rights of the firstborn to Yaakov, and in the future, Esav was not competent to accept the Priesthood and its responsibilities. Esav not only sold the firstborn rights to Yaakov. He scorned them, by selling them for lentils.

The Talmud teaches us that the difference between אמת and שקר is that אמת has “legs” to stand firmly on, while the שקר has just one-legged letters. (Shabbat 104a) In order for you to access the underlying truth, you can't get stuck on one point, on one leg. You need a broader knowledge and awareness, like the two-legged letters of אמת. Big-picture thinking is the way G-d runs His truth in His world of optical illusions. The Chafetz Chaim explains why the signature of G-d is Truth. Because when you look at the letters אמת on a signet ring, they appear to be backward. Only after the letters are stamped can we see the message that is intended. The same is with recognizing the truth of G-d in the world: we need big-picture thinking. In the present, when we are looking at the letters of Emet on the signet ring, it does not look like Emet, for in the present, the world looks like it is full of Sheker. But only when one is able to see the bigger picture of past, present, future can one see the Emet, the truth that G-d is really in charge. Real truth, eternal truth, is always a blend of past, present, and future. When we get locked into the present, we cause ourselves unnecessary stress, aggravation and frustration. As an Egged bus driver once said, No one ever misses a bus. They just got early for the next bus.

When the Torah tells us תָּמִים תְּהִיָּה עִם יְקִיָּקָא אֱלֹהֵיךָ Rashi explains this – Do not inquire (through unnatural means) after the future, and accept whatever G-d brings upon you. How did Rashi understand that the word Tamim means to accept the present, or accept the future? Because being Tam is thinking bigger picture, not getting stuck on something you do not understand.

The month of Kislev is a month in which we are to accept that the reason why we sometimes have difficulty accepting G-d's decisions is because we are behaving like the Ksil. The fool. How so?

אֶת-זֹאת לֹא יָבִין אֶת-זֹאת A simpleton will not know, and a fool will not understand this. The problem with the fool is that he sees a whole airplane, but he walks over to one specific screw and asks, “Why is this screw here?” זֹאת. I want to understand this one little screw; why is it here?! Fool! First understand the whole plane, and then you will be able to understand the reason and place of that screw! But we think that we have better questions than that fool. I want to understand why I did not catch this bus. I want to understand why people are not being nice to me (most of the time, they themselves don't know). I want to understand why I do not understand why...

In the big picture, when we bring in past and future, we have a lot to be humble about. All haughtiness is a lie, for it is focusing on one moment. This was the key to our forefather Avraham's humility, especially when he was praying to G-d for G-d to change His decision about Sodom. וְאָנֹכִי עָפָר וָאֵפֶר And I am like dust and ashes. Why dust and ashes? Because Ashes are something that may have had a glorious past before you burnt them, but now, they are only ashes. Dust may have had no past, but it has potential for a glorious future. Avraham said to G-d, My greatest feeling of humility comes from looking at my past

G-D, WHY THE DELAY?

People don't have as hard a time believing in G-d as they do accepting G-d. So many times, people pray and G-d makes the person wait, and then, sometimes, only after a while, G-d gets things moving. Many times, many people have a hard time understanding G-d, and accepting that He has His reasons for the delay.

and my future. Then I realize how humble I need to be. I realize that You have reasons that human beings are not capable of understanding, when they focus on the details of the present. One of the names the Torah uses for the word “grave”, is the word שאול, pronounced as Sheol. Doesn't that word mean loan? Why do we call a grave, a loan? As Amin Adjmi once told me, All that we own in life is a loan, except for our own souls...

Many times in life, we don't want to face the truth, because the truth may be too hard to accept, too humbling. And our ego is sometimes more precious to us than our ability to get on in life. So then the sad thing happens: we lie to ourselves again. And a lie told often enough eventually seems to us to be the truth. All this makes life complicated. But Yaakov was a simple man. He was the man of truth. He was the other extreme of his twin brother, who was loved by Yitzhak כִּי-יָצַד בְּפִיו because he had game in his mouth. What does that mean? A hunter's trade is to fool its prey into thinking that the coast is clear, while actually, the trap has been set. The greatest danger is when someone fools himself. Like the enticing appearance of prey, as it looks in the present, but in the big picture, when we bring in the future, the person is just setting himself up for a trap. Esav was so good at fooling his father, he even fooled himself. Yaakov was the opposite of fooling himself; he totally accepted himself, as he was. Everything was clear, thought out – past, present, future. Yaakov never, ever, fooled himself.

A lie can travel half way around the world while the truth is still putting on its shoes. Because for the truth, we need to decelerate making the final analysis. Not to jump to conclusions. To be “simple”, not to assess the present without factoring in the past and future.

Everything in the Shidduch of Rivka was clearly the Hand of G-d, and how it all happened so fast is amazing. It is so strange then, that G-d made them wait so long for a child. Yitzhak and Rivka prayed, and G-d put them on hold. Why should they have to wait so long to have a child?

Rabbi Yosef Chaim Sonnenfeld points to an amazing thing in our Parasha. ויעתר לו ה' And G-d allowed Himself to be entreated by Yitzhak's plea. Rashi adds, נתפצר ונתפס ונתפתה לו, G-d was persuaded by Yitzhak, and G-d granted Yitzhak children. Here, Rashi is stressing, that G-d allowed Himself to be persuaded to grant Yitzhak children, something He was not really ready, otherwise, to do. What does this mean?

We know that Yitzhak's son, Esav, on the day of his Bar Mitzvah, transgressed the cardinal sins. He came home, and found Yaakov busy brewing lentils, the food that is traditionally eaten by mourners. This is because Avraham had just passed away, and Yitzhak was in mourning.

The Midrash teaches that Avraham died on that day because G-d did not want him to see how his grandson, Esav, had left religion. This would not be a שיבה טובה, a happy ending, for Avraham. So Avraham actually had to die five years earlier than he was supposed to. He died at 175, instead of dying at the age of 180, like his son Yitzhak.

Now, the reason why he died five years earlier was because of his grandson Esav's misbehavior when Esav reached bar mitzvah. This means that if Esav would have come into the world on the day that he was supposed to, Avraham would have lived a full life of 180 years. So, why was Esav born five years before his time? Because Yitzhak prayed and prayed, so much, that G-d was persuaded, and gave him a son five years earlier than planned.

Of course, we need to pray for things that are important. But when G-d does not answer us as fast as we want to, every minute of a delay has a reason.

There is a wild story that happened with the Arizal. The story is cited in the Sefer Kav Hayashar. A forty-year-old man approached the Arizal, saying that he had not yet merited finding a wife. As much as he dated, it never bore results. Either she did not want him, or he did not want her. The man asked the Arizal for a bit of advice. Shockingly, the Arizal told him, "Your shidduch lives in Alexandria, in Egypt. Go there. Her name is so-and-so, and her father's name is so-and-so".

The man who believed the Arizal traveled the dangerous roads from Tzfat down to Egypt, and when he finally arrived in Alexandria, he asked if anyone knew the father. It turned out that the man was a well known member of the community, in charge of the taxes in town. When he asked about the daughter, he was told that she was of marriageable age and that a suitable husband was being sought for her. She was said to be a wonderful person, attractive, and only twenty years old.

He went to the shadchan in town and asked if it was possible to arrange him a meeting. The shadchan approached the father of the girl and said. "I have a nice, 40-year-old man, and he would like to meet your daughter. The father agreed, and the two met. They enjoyed each other's company, and after a few meetings, they agreed to get married a month later. The engagement worked out nicely, and the wedding was well attended by Rabbis and respected community members. They had a beautiful wedding.

The father of the girl gave a whopping 150 thousand dinars for the dowry. The man was very happy with his new wife, but not for very long. Three months later, the wife got sick. Her situation got so bad that she died within a few days. For him, this was, obviously, a huge shock and a great tragedy.

Broken, he went back to the Arizal in Tzfat, and asked, why the Rabbi had sent him to marry that girl. It would have been better, he said, if I would never have known her!

The Arizal told him to take a seat. He had a few questions to ask him. "Do you remember what you worked in 20 years ago?" The man responded that he had owned a bakery. The Arizal asked, "Do you remember who your partner was?" The man said, Yimah Shmo, that cursed man! That partner robbed me of all my money! Because of him, I lost out on 150 thousand dinar!

The Arizal told him that that was the answer. The woman you married – her soul, in her previous life, was that partner. He died shortly after he ran away with your money, and in Heaven it was decided that he would need to come back, in reincarnation, to marry you, and bring you pleasure for three months, to rectify the pain that this Neshama caused you when you were partners in the bakery. So, after the three months, her Tikkun was done, and her Neshama returned to its Creator. And because the amount that you lost was 150 thousand dinar, you were paid back in the dowry. And this is the reason why your marriage was delayed until you were 40, for you needed to wait until she was ready to get married. Now, it is time for you to go and get married to the wife that you will remain with, happily ever after.

R' Yitzhak Fanger recently told a story that a certain woman had told him. The woman was doing laundry, while her six year old daughter was looking for sweets that were high up in the kitchen cabinets. The girl fell backwards, on her head. The loud noise of the fall startled the mother, and she lost herself when she saw her daughter on the floor, in a bad state. The ambulance came as fast as it could and took mother and daughter to Terem, where it was decided to rush the girl to the Emergency room in the hospital. Things looked much too serious for Terem. When they got to the hospital, a nurse came, looked at the child, and decided (something she was not allowed to, as she was not a doctor) that the child's condition was not an emergency and could wait. They waited 6 hours, from 8 pm until 2 am. The child was very hungry, so the mother searched in her purse, finding only a bag of raisins, which she gave her daughter. She waited impatiently until a doctor arrived, who immediately decided that the child needed anesthesia, so that he would be able to begin complicated head surgery. The doctor asked why the mother had waited 6 hours to come after the child had fallen. The mother frowned and said that she was there earlier, but the nurse decided that it was not an emergency.

The doctor asked to make sure, before administering the anesthesia, that the child had not eaten anything for the last few hours. The mother felt horrible, because she did give her daughter some raisins, just a half an hour before! Sternly, the doctor said that she would need to wait another 6 hours without food, so that he could begin anesthesia and surgery.

Now, the mother was beside herself. She started asking G-d – why?. Why did the nurse say that it was not an emergency? Why did she make the foolish mistake of giving the girl the raisins, without asking the doctor first? And why does she have to wait another six hours to start the surgery? Doesn't G-d have mercy on her daughter?

When the 6 hours had passed, the doctor came, ready to start his medical procedures. He checked the child, and told the mother that now, it does not seem as though the child will have to go through head surgery. Something happened over those six hours.

Now all delays made sense.

THE HOLY THIEF

Next to the grave of the Sabba of Shpoli is the famous tombstone that says, "Here lies Yossele, the Holy Thief".

The Hassidic masters tell that the Saba from Shpoli would spend a lot of his time with the Jewish thieves in town. "I can rely on my bandits. I trust in them." One day, the band of thieves planned to steal the treasures of the local church. The church was locked, triple locked. But the thieves learned about a narrow side window, which was close up to the roof of the church. Next to this window, on the inside of the church, was a ladder. The thieves turned to Yossele, who was thin and tall, flexible and swift, brave at heart and perfect for the mission. Nimble as a cat, Yossele climbed up onto the slanted roof. He opened the window and slid down the ladder. A large tapestry served well to package golden idol trophies and silver coins that Yossele found. He tied a rope around his bundle of goods, climbed up the ladder, and pulled up the rope. From above, he called his band, but he did not know that, in the meantime, the police had shown up, and his friends had already fled in every direction. The police noticed Yossele calling up from the roof. They opened the front door of the church and escorted Yossele, from the top of the ladder straight to the bottom cell of the dungeon.

At his court case, Yossele defended his life to the judge with his story. "I saw that all the townsfolk would bring all different types of presents to the statues in the church. Gold and silver. I wanted to check if the statue was for real, or if the townsfolk were being fooled into giving their hard earned money to a hoax. I entered the church; I pinched the idol's nose, but he did not flinch. I started taking the idol's things right in front of his eyes, and he did not make a peep. I got so mad, I said, "This statue is a swindle! I will take all of the money from the statue and give it back to the good, hardworking townspeople."

The judge became enraged with fury and sentenced Yossele to death. Both for Yossele's thievery, and for Yossele's Chutzpah.

But before Yossele's execution, he was offered an ultimatum. "After you did such a brave act, it is a waste of your life that we execute you. If you convert to Christianity, we will make you into a Christian saint, and you will have a great life of glory and honor." Yossele responded, "Yossele is a thief, but Yossele will not rebel against his G-d!" He repeated this statement, again and again, each time they attempted to persuade him.

In front of the whole town, Yossele was brought to a pot of boiling tar. "Yossele, this is your last chance. Convert to Christianity, and you will have life of luxury!" And Yossele responded, "Yossele did a lot of bad things, but Yossele will not rebel against his G-d." They forced his hands into the boiling lead, and reminded him, "Last chance!" Yossele screamed, "Yossele stole, but Yossele won't rebel against his G-d". And those were his last words, as he repeated them, before his body was pushed brutally into the lead.

The Rebbe from Shpoli told his chassidim, before he died, "I want to be buried next to Yossele, the holy thief."

Yitzhak blessed Yaakov, but only after Yitzhak had smelled with his Ruach Hakodesh the Jewish evildoers of the generations that do Teshuvah. וירח את ריח בגדיו He smelled the scent of Yaakov's clothes, hints to וירח את ריח בגדיו, He scented the scent of Gan Eden that emanated from the rebels, the evildoers, who repented. Even the rebels of the Jewish Nation die with the smell of Gan Eden. He smelled Yossele, the holy thief, and he smelled Yosef Mashita.

As the Roman who attempted entering the Temple was struck by an angel, the Romans did not dare to loot it. They needed a Jew to initiate that move. They found the right man. Yosef Mashita. They told this Rasha that the first thing he would take out of the Temple would be his to keep. On each successive time, whatever he took out would belong to the Romans. Yosef Mashita had the audacity to enter the Temple and take out a golden Menorah! The Romans looked at it, and he was shocked when they said to him, "This is a candelabra that belongs in a palace, not in the home of a commoner, like you. Go into the Temple again, and the next thing you take out will be yours." Yosef did not go back in. He refused, saying, "It is enough that I have angered my Master once; I cannot do it again..." They offered him a three-year position of levying taxes (an important and lucrative office). He refused. They threatened him with a death of suffering and torture, but he adamantly refused to repeat his transgression. "It is enough that I angered my Master once; I cannot do it again..." They did not just kill him. They tortured him to death, inflicting upon him unspeakable suffering; but, with his waning strength, he said, over and over, "Woe is to me for I have angered my Maker". (Breishit Rabbah 65; 22) וירח את ריח בגדיו, And he smelled the scent of the rebels. When Yitzhak smelled these descendants coming from Yaakov, he smelled the scent of Gan Eden, and he understood, intuitively, that we need this blessing of superhuman strength.

And then, Yitzhak blessed Yaakov with the blessing that Yaakov's descendants needed in order to stand strong and live their last breaths, sanctifying G-d's Name. And he said, ויתן לך ה'אלקים. And may He give you, the Elokim,... The blessing hints to the source from which the Jewish People got this superhuman strength. Listen closely. And may He give you the Elokim, ... May

G-d give us the G-dliness we need to stand up strong for a higher purpose. G-d's גבורה, G-d's Might, is His strength in allowing His Attribute of Mercy to override His Attribute of Judgement. We all have this G-dliness, this צלם אלוקים inside us. It is the ability to exercise self-discipline; it is the ability to have self-sacrifice. No matter how low a Jew has fallen, there is a point of self-sacrifice he can find from within, a blessing that we received from Yitzhak, לך האלוקים, ויתן לך האלוקים.

What is the secret that separates Yaakov from Esav? It all boils down to self-talk, allowing this voice of G-dliness to take over the inner conversation. The midrash tells us the difference between the Tzaddik and the Rasha. The Tzaddik speaks לבו אל or לבו to his heart or on his heart, חנה מדברת על לבה, ויאמר דוד אל לבו, (while the Rasha speaks בלבו, in his heart. (ויאמר המן בלבו)) It is being confined to the thinking of one's heart that makes all the difference. (M. Rabbah Esther 10)

There is not much written in the Torah about Yitzhak's life, in comparison to the amount written on Avraham and Yaakov, who needed to deal with people. Why? Because Yitzhak's life was about גבורה, overcoming inner battles. Akeidat Yitzhak, self-sacrifice. Yitzhak needed to concentrate on striving to be the best possible father for a son like Esav. And when he saw Esav's Gehinom, when Esav entered his room at the time of the Berachot, it was an even greater Akeidah for Yitzhak than the Akeidah, itself. (ויחרד הרדה גדולה) Maybe I am accountable for this? Maybe my approach as a father was faulty? These were all internal struggles of גבורה, of how to behave with his son.

When Yaakov entered, Yitzhak smelled that same smell (of Gan Eden) that he had smelled at the Akeidah. For Yaakov to listen to his mother, and to risk even the one beracha that was meant for him, and to go against his nature, was an Akeidah for Yaakov. That Akeidah, going against your nature to serve G-d, is the secret path to Gan Eden. The Ben Ish Chai explains that this is the concept of Fear of Heaven. Why not Fear of G-d? Because Heaven, שמים, is made up of אש ומים, fire and water. Fire's nature is to make water evaporate, and water's nature is to put out fire. Fear of Heaven is about going against one's nature when it is necessary, just as fire and water dwell together, to serve G-d. That is what Gan Eden is all about. It is all about the Akeidahs that you go through in life.

THE FULLY CHARGED LIFE

Everyone who walks ארץ, the land, has a רצון, a will. Ask anyone you meet what would be the greatest thing that he could achieve over the next 5 years. You will always get some sort of answer, of some sort of dream, hope, or aspiration. When someone has a clear, laser-beam Ratzon, then he is רץ, he runs! Because he is living the "Charged" Life, a life full of energy, motivation, alacrity, excitement, etc.

But there are two types of "C" lives that all the rest of the people in the world fall under. There is the Caged Life. The life where people are manipulated by fear, or are "stuck". I wish I could achieve x, but this person, or that circumstance, or some other manipulation or excuse, is stopping me from reaching my dreams.

The third life is the Comfortable life, where people give up their dreams, their hopes, their destiny, because they prefer the comfortable lifestyle they are in. Their comfort zone is too precious. They talk the talk – they talk about what is important, they talk about what would be amazing in life. But they don't walk the walk – they don't want to pay the price for the lifestyle they wish for, they don't want to get out of their comfort zones, they don't want to take responsibility. The lifestyle they live is diametrically opposed to the life of their dreams. They are not willing to get uncomfortable for the sake of their ambitions.

Baruch Hashem, we live in a time where there are so many yeshivot, seminaries, Shuls, organizations, etc. Ken Yirbu. Unfortunately, though, so many people in our Frum system have some sort of spiritual aspiration, but very little motivation. Low battery. This is because they are living either the Caged life, or the Comfortable life. They don't want to pay the price of being more spiritual. Of taking that responsibility of bringing G-d into their everyday lives, as much as possible.

Esav sold his rights as a firstborn to Yaakov for nothing more than a bowl of lentils. The word the Torah uses is ויבז עשו את הבכורה. And Esav scorned the rights to the firstborn. R Wolbe asks, How can a person either buy or sell the rights of a firstborn? Isn't that something spiritual? R Wolbe explains how Esav sold his spirituality, his firstborn rights. Spirituality can be sold, according to how much you don't value it. And on the flip side, spirituality can be "bought" according to how much you are willing to give up for it. Spirituality is something that is not tangible, so its price, whatever you are willing to invest in it or risk for it, is its value. This explains how the deal of the firstborn sale went through...Don't we have a rule of הונאה יותר משתות that something cannot be sold for a price that is much greater, or much lower, than its real value? How, then, could the sale of the firstborn rights go through for such a low price? The answer is that spirituality is worth whatever you are willing to barter for it. For a hungry Esav, the bowl of lentils had the same worth as the firstborn birthrights, which were of inestimable value to Ya'akov.

This can also explain why it is considered that Esav "scorned" his firstborn rights, by selling them. Didn't Rashi mention earlier that Esav was afraid to keep his firstborn rights, because of the responsibilities they entailed? Esav was afraid that if he would retain those firstborn rights, he would have the status, legally, of a Kohen. That was the law in his times. Being a Kohen meant being the one to serve G-d, bring sacrifices, be G-d's representative to the people of the world, and representative of the people to G-d. Esav was ready to give up the privileges that come along with the responsibility, not because he belittled being the Firstborn, but because he was afraid of the punishments he would receive for not keeping the strict laws that only the Kohen needs to keep! If he wanted to be absolved of them because of fear of the responsibilities, because he did not want to take any chances, why does the Torah call that "scorning"?

The answer is that to acquire a level of greatness, you need to "pay" – to accept the responsibilities that go along with it. That is its "uncomfortable" price tag. If you do not want to pay the price, it means that you do not want that level of greatness. It means you are not ready to sacrifice, to make your effort to reach that level. It means that you do not really value, what you are not willing to take responsibility for.

This is such a simple, black and white, belief. If you don't want to practice shooting baskets in the dark, you don't want to play basketball like Michael Jordan. If you don't want to learn something again, and again, and again, then you do not want the memory of R' Ovadia Yosef. If you don't want to take the chance of losing a game, you are not ready to win. If you are not willing to get "no"s, you are not ready to make a sale. If you are not ready to learn mussar and look your mistakes in the face, you are not ready to become the great person you can become. It means that these goals are not important enough to you. If your holiness is important, you are willing to give up more internet access, a cooler phone, a better deal, and a more exotic vacation. But, if to save a couple of dollars, you go to places where you see unholy sites, that means that all your holiness is worth to you is a couple of dollars.

What value in life that you live by, will cause you to live a fully charged life? Are you living a charged life, a caged life, or a comfortable life? What comfortable habits or lifestyles are causing you to stay away from that awesome life you truly deserve? How much are you willing to pay, what are you willing to give up in order for you to achieve the life of your dreams?

The more we ask ourselves these questions, the more passionate, real, and charged, our lives will be.

ABSOLUTE PARENTING

Yitzhak was criticized by the sages for not rebuking Eisav enough. The Midrash tells about some other “parenting mistakes”. Avraham did not rebuke Yishmael enough, and King David did not admonish Avshalom, or Adoniah, and that is why they became who they became. On the other hand, Avraham reproved Yitzhak, and Yitzhak reproved Yaakov. That’s why they became who they became. (Midrash R. Shemot 1;1)

This is odd. For the Talmud tells us that in the end of days, G-d will approach each of the Patriarchs. “Avraham, your sons have sinned!” And Avraham will respond, “Let them be wiped out to sanctify Your Name.” But Yitzhak will find merit for the Nation. ” I, also, had a son that sinned. Still and all, I loved him and I forgave him, despite my being flesh and blood. You , the Master of the World, Merciful and Compassionate King, Merciful Father, certainly you can love and have pity on your Sons, despite the fact that they sinned wantonly. (Shabbat 89a, see Iyun Yaakov)

So, was Yitzhak a good parent or a bad one? Was it his fault? Did he make some parenting mistake by loving Esav a lot, or not?

And, if Yishmael and all Hagar’s other children came from him, was Avraham a good parent or a bad one? How about Yaakov’s parenting mistake, favoring Yosef and causing the tribes to be jealous, which the Rabbis criticize and say that because of it we are still in exile today. Does this make Yaakov a good parent or a bad one? How about King David?

I believe that there is no contraction here. Good parenting is no guarantee for having a good child. And, parenting is not absolute. There is no one good parenting approach. A person cannot be an absolutely good parent or an absolutely bad one, because people are not absolute in these traits; furthermore, there are at least two people involved in parenting, parent and child. Even the best parent can have a problematic child, something comparable to a seasoned chef using inferior ingredients in a cake: despite his experience and ability, the end product will certainly not be up to his usual standard.

A parent has tough decisions to make. Sometimes, deciding between what is in the child’s best interest now, and what is in the child’s best interest in the future. Many times, a parent, who is only a human being, just can’t know what is best . Or just can’t relate to the child’s problem... There are so many questions that have no absolute answers. “If I show him love, it might give him the feeling that I accept him, which will give him self esteem and self confidence. Or, it might let him feel that that I approve of his misbehavior.”

When Yitzhak displayed abundant love for Esav, he felt that this was the only way to parent him. It might be that the right way, also, had its own downside, but it was still the right thing to do, in Yitzhak’s view. (According to one explanation, Yitzhak behaved this way with Eisav, in order to be the one who could find merit at the End of Days, when G-d will approach the Patriarchs about the sins of the Nation.” And Yitzhak loved Esav, for he had game in his mouth” then means, that Yitzhak had game, or merit, in his mouth, for the End of Days.) Those that the Midrash mentions did not fail in their parenting. It seems that there was a decree that these great people needed to deal with such children, and they decided to deal with them in line with their Ruach HaKodesh.

We even find that Esav was born to be a Rasha. Rivka fell off her camel the first time she saw Yitzhak, for she saw a frightening prophecy that an Esav would come from her marriage to Yitzhak. She also had this prophecy while Esav was in her womb. So, Esav was going to be somewhat of an Esav, either way. The question was just how to deal with a difficult child. Still, in the opinion of the Rabbis, the Esav he became was an outcome of insufficient rebuke.

Nowadays, we do not know how to rebuke, for we do not know how to love. The passuk tells us that Hagar stood at a distance, in order not to see her 27-year-old son, Yishmael, die. She was an arrow's shot away, from Yishmael, who was lying in a faint, under a bush in the desert. "And she raised her voice, and she cried. And G-d heard the voice of the lad, and the angel of G-d called out to Hagar from Heaven and said to her, ...'Do not fear, for G-d has listened to the voice of the lad, at that moment.'" Why does the Torah stress that G-d heard the cry of Yishmael and not the cry of his mother, Hagar? Rashi explains that G-d listens first to the prayers of the sick, before listening to others who pray for them. But still, why does the Torah stress this, twice?

Rabbi Shimshon R. Hirsch explains that Hagar did not pray for the sake of her son. She could not bear to see her son die, so she prayed so that she would not see him die. The Torah records that Hagar left him under the bush, and did not stay at his side. That type of mother is not the mother whose prayers pierce the Heavens for a dying son. And this is why G-d did not answer her prayers, but heard her son's.

This is a great lesson in parenting, because it shows how one's actions can be 'sliced and diced'. The same prayer, 'Save my son,' can be for the sake of the son, or the sake of the parent. Likewise, so many actions of a parent, so many responsibilities that he shoulders, so many prayers, so many gifts, so many religious family guidelines, can be put into two different categories: for the child's sake, or for parent's sake. The reason why rebuke needs caution, nowadays, is because in our cold-hearted century, it is so hard to love that child's-sake love.

Many times, parents view their children's successes, or their children's failures, as their own. They look at their children as "their children", not as people. Your child has his own responsibilities. Social responsibilities, scholastic responsibilities, family responsibilities, and, believe it or not, religious responsibilities. Effective parenting is letting go of control on your child's responsibilities as soon as he is able to take care of them himself, delegating your child's responsibilities to him. If you take responsibility for your child's behavior, religious level, successes or failures, when you are not supposed to, you form a manipulative situation. Yitzhak knew not to take responsibility for someone else's – in this case, Esav's – actions.

As a coach, I look at parenting as performance, not as a bunch of parenting rules and regulations. The latter approach springboards the negative questions that the parent asks himself, or says aloud, "Am I a bad parent? What have I done to make me a bad parent?" This is a dead end question, and one that is not precise. Good or bad is relative, not measurable. The effective question is, "What is my best option to respond in this present situation, for the sake of my child's future?" The good/ bad parent questions flood the mind when the whole issue of parenting is focused on the parent, not on the best interests of the child. Instead, I ask, "What is the best option for the child's future?", and I always come out with better performance that way.

WORDS FROM MY HEART

Imagine how your life would be if you had a behavior technique that would make you the greatest negotiator you know. Imagine how great it would be if you had in your hands a way to smooth out all the rocky relationships you have with the people it is hard for you to get along with. Imagine you had at your disposal the tool that separates between the righteous and the wicked, the one that empowers you to become a tzaddik. Well, stop imagining. After this article, you will be in possession of that tool. After you will have finished reading, the only thing you'll need in order to become successful, will be to take action. Because ALL success, always boils down to two things. Knowing what to do and DOING IT. Knowing what not to do, and STOP DOING IT. Simple.

Picture to yourself the person that you do not get along with. The person that, excuse me for saying so, gets on your nerves. What do you feel when you see that person's face is in your mind's eye? WRITE IT DOWN. Now, get out of yourself. Picture yourself going into that person, into his face, into his values, into his clothes. For a minute, change your name to his name. And, while you are being him, but really being him, what comes to his mind about you? What are you thinking, while being him, about you? Write it all down. Once you do this properly, you will be able to see the things from that person's perspective, and it will be easier for you to communicate effectively and deal with that person. Step two, using the same technique, get yourself into a third person: think, now, that you are a third person, an outsider, an impartial observer. What would you, the neutral, outside third party, advise you to do in this situation to improve this relationship? Can you see both sides, and the pity that they are both not getting along? When we change perspectives like this, we begin to realize that it is not that those people are difficult. They are just different.

If you have to negotiate with someone, the best way to go about it is to get out of yourself, out of your interests, and see things from the other person's perspective. If you can't use this technique, do whatever you can to learn the person's perspective. Then, think of what you can do to satisfy the other person's interests and needs, while at the same time, making it work for you. It takes some thought, but it can get you far.

And, this is all learnt from the midrash. (M. Rabbah Esther 10) The midrash tells us the difference between the Tzaddik and the Rasha. The Tzaddik speaks אל לבו or אל לבו to his heart or on his heart, while the Rasha speaks בלבו, in his heart. It is being confined to the thinking of one's heart that makes all the difference.

For instance, in our parasha, when Esav was angry at his brother Yaakov for taking the blessings from Yitshak that he, Esav, believed were his, he said in his heart, "The days of my father's mourning will get closer and I will kill Yaakov, my brother." (27;

41) He knew that he could not hurt his brother Yaakov while Yaakov was learning Torah. Yaakov would not stop learning Torah for anything. The only thing that could make Yaakov stop was his being an אבל, a mourner. "Once Yitshak dies, and Yaakov is mourning, I can kill him..." And Esav kept thinking in his heart... If I kill Yaakov only, then I will be summoned to the court of Shem V' Ever. Instead, I will go and marry Uncle Yishmael's daughter. I will get Yishmael so angry at Yitzhak for getting the blessings from Avraham, that he, Yishmael, will kill Yitzhak. Then, I will kill Yaakov, and then kill Yishmael, since I am the Go'el Hadam (closest blood relative to the murdered that has the right and even obligation to avenge murder) for my father, and I will get all the blessings from Avraham for myself. (Breishit Rabbah 66) These are the thoughts that Esav said to himself. How did he say it? ויאמר עשו בלבו, in his heart. Not to his heart, and not on his heart. All these outrageous thoughts and feelings going on inside, even though they were unthinkable for a man who was from the greatest ever at honoring and respecting his father. Just get someone to kill Dad, and then kill your brother and uncle.

The Midrash tells us about another Rasha who spoke to himself in his heart. ויאמר המן בלבו, Haman said in his heart. When Achashverosh asked Haman "what could be done for the man whom the king wishes to honor ?" Haman thought to himself, Achashverosh wants to honor me and is asking me what he could do to show me honor. How outrageous. Why would the king ask Haman how to honor Haman? Another thought in the heart. A thought of the Rasha.

But when tzaddikim talk to themselves, as when Chana was endlessly praying to G-d for a child, and she needed to stay focused in her prayers, (see Radak) despite her dashed hopes, it says חנה מדברת על לבה, she was speaking on her heart. When David Hamelech was musing to himself that perhaps, he should run from Shaul with his 600 men to Eretz Plishtim despite Shaul's heartfelt apology, it says ויאמר דוד אל לבו. (Shmuel a 27) Because the Tzaddikim have their hearts in their control. And, in contrast, the Reshaim are in the control of their hearts. It all has to do with how one speaks to himself, the way one manages inner thoughts. This Midrash needs explanation. Bear with me.

One of the basic tenets of the Jewish religion is that a person comes to this world to sanctify G-d's Name. Surprisingly, the Vilna Gaon (in the beginning of Even Sh'leima) says that the purpose of a person's visit to the Universe is to break a Middah, a negative character trait. How can we reconcile the seeming contradiction?

The answer is that most people know what they can do to serve G-d better, what they can do that will sanctify G-d's Name. The problem is that we sometimes have a middah that is holding us back. Laziness, anger, haughtiness, materialistic drives, jealousy ,etc. If one breaks the Middah in order to serve G-d, he shows that G-d and His Will are very, very, important to him. People do not change themselves for most things in life. They put the effort to change their character only for things that are very important to them. By working hard to remove a middah that is preventing him from doing G-d's Will, one demonstrates that the Will of G-d is so important to him. And this is how that person becomes a living, walking Kiddush Hashem.

If one serves G-d only as long as it fits in with the parameters of his character, or does only what is convenient and easy for him – only if it goes along with how he perceives himself, then although those mitzvot are important, still, the person has not yet fulfilled his mission. He has not yet transformed himself into a walking, talking, Kiddush Hashem. One needs to first break a characteristic in order for him to really sanctify G-d's Name.

Although it sounds strange, but the Torah mentions in numerous places that a person thinks in his heart. There are two types of thoughts. There are thoughts from the head, and thoughts from the heart. The thoughts of the heart are beliefs, emotions, desires and the like, while the thoughts of the head are the intellectual ,rational and cognitive thoughts. The tzaddikim use the following formula: they let the thoughts of the head control the thoughts of the heart. When G-d sets down a way for us to behave, and that way goes against the Tzaddik's beliefs, emotions, and/or desires, the Tzaddik exercises control over those thoughts from the heart. Tzaddikim need to break a middah, something in their nature, when it goes against G-d's Torah and Mitzvot. So, they align their actions with G-d's Will, and do not remain confined to their habitual thoughts, emotions or life beliefs. Even if their hearts dictate a certain behavior, if it is contrary to what they know should be done, they overcome that impulse. They are able to see things from a perspective outside of their own "hearts". They transcend the self and follow what is right, from the Torah's point of view. The Reshaim don't. They believe it is not in their control, that they just can't. They see the world from the point of view of the heart, from their desires and emotions, and their personal perspectives and beliefs. They persist in thinking in such a way, even if it sounds ridiculous. Because to the Reshaim, the perspective of the heart is the only perspective.

This is how we can understand how the head of Esav merited to be buried in the Ma'arat Hamachpela. (Baal Haturim says that this is hinted to in the first letters of the words עַפְרוֹן שָׂדֵה עֵינִיקָם that spell Esav.) He thought, in his head, like a Tzaddik. His body was not buried there, for his body did not follow the thoughts of his head! This is what can decide if one is a Tzaddik or a Rasha . It all depends on if you are willing to go out of your beliefs, desires, and emotions, to do what you know is the right thing in life.

THE CHALLENGES OF THE FFB (FRUM FROM BIRTH)

Both Yitzchak and Rivkah had to pray hard until G-d granted them children. But a close look at the beginning of our parashah reveals that G-d actually answered the prayers of Yitzchak, not the prayers of Rivkah (Yevamot 64a). What was the reason for this? The Talmud explains that Yitzchak had an advantage over his wife: He was the righteous child of a righteous father, whereas Rivkah was the righteous child of a wicked father. The rule is that the prayers of a tzaddik descending from a tzaddik are more effective than those of a tzaddik descending from a rasha (wicked person).

Now, we may wonder about this rule since the Torah earlier indicates that Rivkah came from a family and community of evildoers (at least in some ways) in order to emphasize her greatness: although she was surrounded by evil influences, she did not allow herself to be tainted by them. Furthermore, we are all familiar with the statement of our Sages that baalei teshuvah (penitents, returnees to Torah Judaism) “stand in a place where even full-fledged tzaddikim do not stand.” That is, they are on a higher spiritual level. If so, why should the prayers of Yitzchak have been more effective than those of Rivkah simply because Yitzchak was “religious” from birth?

The explanation is that although Rivkah came from an irreligious – actually, idolatrous – home, she was not the baal teshuvah our Sages were referring to. They were referring to someone born into a religious family who sinned, and then returned to the fold by repenting (doing teshuvah). Let us understand this idea, which may strike us as counterintuitive. Why should someone who was able to withstand the temptations of the lifestyle of his or her family and community be less effective in prayer than a “tzaddik ben tzaddik,” a person who did not have to struggle with all of this?

One answer is almost obvious if we think about it. When the righteous child of righteous parents prays, he can draw on zechut avot – the merits of his righteous parents and ancestors. This explains why there are families whose prayers are especially powerful (and why many people turn to righteous present-day members of these families for “prayer assistance” in times of need).

I would like to suggest a second answer as well. No-one would deny the great achievement of those who took it upon themselves to become religious when they had to leave the comfort of their social setting – and sometimes endure opposition from family when it came to kosher foods, Shabbat, and similar issues. These people struggled tremendously for the sake of truth, and their reward is enormous. This is what Rivkah had to go through.

But apparently, in the eyes of our Sages, this does not compare with the difficulties one who was born religious faces in keeping on track. One who is born in a house where the surrounding culture and beliefs run against the culture and beliefs they have been raised on, may have to struggle to withstand many temptations all around, and to accept the reassurance of parents that they are missing nothing. In contrast, someone who came from a shallow world in which there is no ultimate meaning or goal in life, and family life revolves around entertainment and vacations, knows that he is not really missing out on anything. He has experienced it all, and knows just how shallow all of these “pleasures” really are. This is not so for the religious. They have to take it on faith, so to speak, and sometimes labor to ignore the allurements of cheap thrills and worldly pleasures.

And this is exactly what Yitzchak did. He grew up in a home without such influences and allurements (after his brother Yishmael was sent away). He never experienced any of the outside world’s so-called pleasures, yet he did not feel deprived. For this alone, he had greater merit than Rivkah.

Four Contemporary Challenges

* Religious Jews sometimes convince themselves that they will not be influenced by having significant contact with secular Jews or gentiles. I can tell you from what I have observed over the years that this is far from the truth. It is just possible, by the way, that there is a Biblical precedent for this. It seems to me that the slight spiritual decline experienced by Yehudah (the son of Yaakov, our Patriarch) – as described in Parashat VaYeishev – might be connected with the business partnership he made with one of the townspeople.

* Religious Jewish parents – especially in Western societies – sometimes convince themselves that the open-mindedness of the surrounding culture is also good policy at home. What they forget of course, is that they are opening a Pandora's Box which may explode in their face. While children should be given the power to make certain decisions, we believe that the alternatives we allow them to choose between must all be acceptable from a Torah standpoint.

* The religious student often sees the student from a non-religious or less Orthodox home taking his prayers and studies more seriously than himself or herself. In the girls' seminaries, an FFB student might not understand why she has difficulty keeping to the standards of a friend or acquaintance who observes a modest dress code that is stricter

SEEING THROUGH THE SKIES

And it was when Yitzchak became advanced in age and his eyes dimmed from seeing... (27:1). Rashi explains why Yitzchak had lost his eyesight: when Yitzchak was on the altar and his father was about to slaughter him, the Heavens opened up, the Angels were crying and their tears fell into the eyes of Yitzchak, so that they were dimmed.

R' Shmuel Birnbaum asks: What does this mean? That the skies were opened for the angels to see what was happening? Couldn't the angels see everything just perfectly from their place in the heavens without the skies opening up?

He answered that up in the heavens, everything is clear. There are no questions. There are no doubts. All the things that we humans go through, all the tests that we endure due to being unable to fathom G-d's plan, are crystal clear when seen from up there.

The angels were able to see how Avraham was going through the test; they saw that he would be asked – at the last second – to put the knife down. They knew that G-d would explain that He had requested from Avraham only to bring up his son then her own. Instead of giving in to the temptation to keep away from the friend or acquaintance, she should seriously consider re-evaluating her own standards.

* Finally, FFB's should meditate on the reward they will receive in the World-to-Come for living a lifetime without looking around outside the Torah world to see if they are missing out on anything. This is a major test for some – especially in Israel, where there is an organized movement to get religious people to become non-religious. I strongly recommend to any FFB who finds this temptation getting the better of him or her, to speak with people who were seduced by this insidious movement, but had the inner strength and wisdom to return to the fold.

on the Altar, not to slaughter but to place him there and then take him down. Knowing all they knew, from the point of view of the upper world, there was no reason for tears. There was no emotion. It was simply a test.

But then, G-d opened the Heavens. The angels were able to see things from the point of view of this world. What Avraham felt. What was going through Avraham's mind. How could he do this to his son? How could he face his wife, Sarah? How could he face the world and explain what he did? The tears spilled from the eyes of the angels as they were able to perceive the thoughts and feelings surging through the mind and heart of our Patriarch.

When people cry, when tears emerge, it is a result of emotions that cannot be expressed by words. When emotions are too much to hold in, they emerge as tears. The tests that we go through in this world bring us to tears. The tests of others bring us to tears. But in the world up high, everything is understood, and everything can be explained. And therefore, up there, there are no tears.

When we see others going through trials, we sometimes see a solution, or a different perspective from that seen by the person who is suffering. When we attempt to tell them of our idea, offer suggestions or propose a different perspective...the person suddenly gets frustrated, or, perhaps, feels that he is not understood. And the truth is that if we make our suggestions, then it is more than likely that we did not even listen to what he had been telling us. A person has so many things going on in his life story, with so many past emotions, that a second person would have to listen to him for a very long time in order to really understand what he is going through. He would have to ask a lot of questions. Something like breaking down the barrier that exists between people. There were more than a few times that I experienced this in coaching. I would listen for a few hours, just asking questions to understand what the person was going through, and then I wanted to cry. I knew then, when I felt a tear on my own cheek, that I had listened well. I knew that I had broken the barrier between us. Something like what happened when the angels cried, after they saw through the Heavens.

VOICE LESSONS

A person I was coaching wanted to change his behavior: he wanted to stop getting angry. This person did not realize that his voice was very deep and had something threatening about it. When he talked, it sounded as if he was in charge of everything, giving commands. It even sounded as if he was straining himself to talk deeply and loudly. I noticed this and introduced him to a voice teacher that I knew. In one session, the voice teacher showed this fellow that he could speak with a more relaxed voice, a higher pitch, and more softly. He worked on changing his voice, and he stopped getting angry! People who would usually avoid him, including his children, now found it pleasant to speak to him. I, myself, couldn't believe how much this tactic worked. So far, this fellow has gone two weeks without getting angry even once. He used to get angry twice a day.

The way we speak has so much to do with how we behave. The tone and color of voice has a massive effect on us. The way we say things influences what we feel as much as it expresses what is inside us. We see this in Yaakov Avinu. When Yitzchak heard his son Yaakov's voice and felt the hairy touch of Esav, he said, הקול קול יעקב והידיים ידי עשו. The voice is the voice of Yaakov, and the hands are the hands of Esav. Rashi explains this that "the voice of Yaakov" means the manner in which Yaakov spoke. When Yaakov wanted his father to stand, he would request, קום נא Please stand. When Esav would ask his father to stand, he would tell him יקום אבי, Stand up, Father. Yitzchak was in tuned to this difference, and this is how he had a feeling that it might not be Esav, but Yaakov, standing before him.

The question is, if Yaakov changed everything about himself, his clothes, his name and whatever else was connected to his identity, why didn't he change the way he spoke, as well? Why couldn't he just have said, "Get up Father," just as his brother Esav would say?

The answer is that Yaakov was willing to change almost everything about himself. But to speak like a man of the fields, like his brother, Esav, without gentleness, without politeness and respect – that, he was not willing to change. Even for a minute. Why didn't he change his voice? After all, using his regular style of speech could make him seem a trickster in his Father's eyes. And, what's more, he could lose the blessings. But changing his "voice" – the way he spoke to people – meant changing his true identity. That was something that he would just not do.

It is not only what we say that tells others about us. It is how we say it.

DEALING WITH A WAYWARD CHILD

Yitzchak loved Esav because game was in his mouth... (Bereishit 25:28)

But why? Why did Yitzchak favor Esav more than his righteous son Yaakov? The Ben Ish Chai explains that if we look closely, we will see in this verse two reasons for Yitzchak's surprising preference. The first reason is that Esav "trapped" his father with his smooth and misleading talk. He slyly presented himself as a righteous person by asking his father questions which gave the impression that he adhered to Jewish Law scrupulously. For example, he asked about tithing salt. Yitzchak, however, did not fall for his son's pretensions. But he showed Esav love outwardly in order that his son should not continue in his wicked ways and go off the religious path entirely. Yitzchak believed that by building such a relationship with his son, Esav would – out of respect for his father – refrain from the sort of behavior that would embarrass his prestigious family.

The second reason why Yitzchak loved Esav is given at the end of the verse: "and Rivkah loved Yaakov." Since Rivkah outwardly portrayed her love to Yaakov, and Yitzchak himself loved Yaakov inwardly, Yitzchak feared that Esav's jealousy would get the better of him. Yitzchak felt it appropriate to show love for his son Esav in order that Esav should not feel jealous of Rivkah's love toward Yaakov. He hoped that Esav would suffice with the love of his father.

There is a very important lesson here for parents of the early 21st Century. Let's be honest: One of the wonders of the modern world is a family where the children really have respect for their parents. What is the secret of such families? More often than not, the answer is that these children were respected as people by their parents. By being respected, they were taught what respect means. If we want our children to respect us, we have to first respect them. This is something that even an Esav was able to pick up.

Another important lesson in parenting that emerges from the parashah is this: a key reason why a child from a religious family leaves his parents' path is because he feels that he has no relationship with his father. A father must remember this at all times, and learn from Yitzchak. In the merit of dealing with his son Esav with love, and not throwing him out of the house, Yitzchak became our defender in Heaven. Through his example, he beseeches G-d to let His wayward children come back home to Torah and Mitzvot. Indeed, if we ourselves follow Yitzchak's example when faced with children who stray from the Torah path, this may well help generate the merit which will bring the Final Redemption.
